Community Recognition

She:kon Sewakwe:kon Akwesasro:non!

I hope this opening reaches you in good health and spirits. It has been a long time since Kawennios has been available for community members. I hope all has been well with you since the last time we published. A lot has happened since then, we are quickly coming out of a pandemic that affected and changed our lives. There were many successes and many heart breaks. We were able to mobilize our community into protecting ourselves from a virus that is still with us today. Participating in a community wide vaccination program saved many lives and we were able to find out that the vaccinations were not designed to prevent us from getting COVID, but it lessened the affects of it.

The landscape of Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe is rapidly changing. There are or going to be many new construction projects going on in Akwesasne. The IGA Building, which has sat dormant for years will now serve as a building for tribal programs. This will house a lot of our programs that have been scattered throughout the community. The SRMT will also be constructing an amphitheater on the Tribal campus to bring life back to arts, something that has taken a back seat to sports and other things in the community. We will soon have a home for our kids and young people to express themselves in music, drama and dance. It will be a place where families can gather comfortably in the outdoors to see their loved ones perform. The Tribe is also looking for new homes for the Early Learning Center, also known as Headstart and Day Care, in part because the building has outgrown its use and the future leaders of Akwesasne need a new place to nurture our newest generation of Akwesashró:non.

As the weather is also quickly changing, I would like to remind everyone to be mindful of the children and people walking on the roadways of Akwesasne. Be safe and be kind. My dad told me a long time ago that we all have a responsibility to make Akwesasne a better place. Lets all be a part in keeping Akwesasne a great place to live.

Missing Murdered Indigenous Peoples Day

May 5th is nationally recognized as the official day for Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women (MMIW) since 2017 when a congressional declaration was passed . The Three Sisters Program and Seven Dancers Coalition sought to make this day one for all Indigenous people who have suffered abuse and sexual violence.

The community gathered at Generations Park on May 5th and joined hands in a ceremonial round dance for Missing Murdered Indigenous People (MMIP).

The Ohen:ton Karihwatchkwen was recited, by Akwesasne youth and the event commenced. Guest speaker Keena Marie King offered remarks about MMIP, followed by a song performance by Karototen Pray Lazore.

Indigenous Hoop dancer Feryn King made a special guest appearance and performed a traditional hoop dance for the event attendees. Bringing the event full circle, the community joined hands and a round danced ensued for those affected by violence against Indigenous people and for those whose lives have been lost.

A big Niawen'ko:wa to the SRMT Three Sisters Program and the Seven Dancers Coalition for organizaing this event and bringing our community one step closer to healing.

You are not alone.

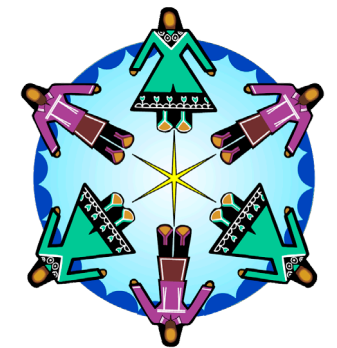

“More than 1.5 million American Indian and Alaska Native women have experienced violence in their lifetime.”

Dispose of used motor oil the right way

Store the used motor oil in proper rigid screw-top closed containers.

Please no leaking or damaged container. Not in water or milk jugs

Do not mix used motor oil with water or other fluids. Only used motor oil.

Label the container explaining what HW substance it is that you are bringing.

Bring your used motor oil to the collector. You can bring 5 gallons each day for free.

Eco-Friendly Engine Oil

Two-hundred million gallons of used oil are improperly disposed of each year. Used motor oil has toxic chemicals and heavy metals. Bicycles or electric vehicles are the way to go, if you still have a regular vehicle, consider using different motor oil. Today there are biofuel alternatives to petroleum-based motor oil such as synthetic oil and biodiesel. These are environmentally friendly and have better performance.

The fully synthetic BIO1 0W-20 oil is made with 100% plant-based oil and it's a USDA-certified Bio-based product. The other BIO1 5W-30 oil has only 25%. It is composed of plant-base oil renewable energy feedstock; such as palm, coconut, and soy. This means that it absorbs more CO2 than the finished product produces. It also has outstanding emission control. It comes in a sustainably-constructed container made from PCR (Post Consumer Recycled) plastic.

Regular synthetic motor oil is more affordable than bio-based motor oil. Synthetic motor oil is better than conventional motor oil because using synthetic oil results in a reduction in consumption and less oil waste, so it contributes to environmental sustainability. You can decide between synthetic or Bio-based oil, as better alternatives to conventional oil.

We have found conventional used motor oil in the Hazardous Waste Material Flow Project trash samples. Do not place motor oil in the trash. Recyclers have complained, so do not mix used motor oil with water. Use the Hazardous Waste Resource List found at the SRMT Solid Waste Program website to dispose of used motor oil the right way.

Emerald Ash Borer Biocontrol Check-In

Written by Jessica Raspitha, EDLR Program Manager

In March, the SRMT Environment Division Land Resources Program assisted our partners at USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) with an ash peeling exercise to determine the efficacy of local biocontrol efforts. Biocontrol efforts for Emerald Ash Borer (EAB) consist of the planned release of four species of parasitoid wasps in areas with established EAB populations.

Under the guidance of Juli Gould, a USDA APHIS Biological Scientist and Theresa Murphy, Biological Science Technician, four ash trees showing signs of EAB damage were removed from each of three biocontrol release locations (12 trees total). These trees were brought to Akwesasne for a collaborative effort to peel the bark from each tree to extract EAB eggs and larvae for further analysis. EAB larvae are extracted by carefully peeling back layers of tree bark to expose the phloem layer. In a healthy tree, the phloem is used to transport water and nutrients up the tree from the roots however, in infested ash trees, EAB larvae eat their way through this tissue, creating galleries that slowly kill the tree. When these galleries are found, the layers of the tree are slowly peeled back until the larvae can be located and removed.

USDA APHIS will further analyze the extracted larva and collected eggs to determine whether or not the parasitoid wasps are successfully reproducing at the sites. Signs of reproduction are indicative that the biocontrol releases are working and destroying EAB eggs and larvae in the process.

SRMT is currently working with forest etymologists from USDA for our own efforts to combat EAB – both in Akwesasne and in ash stands in State forests. Our efforts include a pesticide injection to provide EAB resistance to a select number of trees that can be used as a seed source, parasitoid wasp releases, and silvicultural treatments to promote habitat that is better suited to producing basket-grade ash trees.

Parasitoid wasp facts:

- They are smaller than a mosquito,
- Are stingless and do not bite humans or pets.
- They hunt and kill EAB eggs and larvae by laying their own eggs into them.

Salmon River School District’s Superintendent Stanley Harper and Saint Regis Mohawk School Principal Alison Benedict led everyone on a tour of the Saint Regis Mohawk School, showing the after effects of the major flooding over the years. The morning ended with a luncheon, where Commissioner Rosa and Minerva White were gifted with baskets.
